All day today I met you
Met your face, met your name
And the sirens were calling me outside

All day today I saw you
Saw your arms, saw your eyes
That would flash like a lamp or a streetlight

Don't you know?
Don't you know?

All day today
The sun was out
The winter stayed inside the shade
And I hoped it would last a week or more

All day today
I wrote you
Wrote your name, wrote a rhyme
But the wind blew away the words outside

Don't you know?
Don't you know?

All the little lambs that fall
All the little lambs
That tell you

All day today I left you
Left your home, left your hands
And the road walked away my blues and grays

All day today I saw you
Saw your arms, saw your eyes
That would flash like a lamp or a streetlight

Don't you know?
Don't you know?

All the little lambs that fall
All the little lambs

They tell you
