Sparrow and wolf lay as still as the blades of the grass like worn leather boots, of colour and size that would last caught them a lark in a trap, and each held a wing then they tore it apart, before that small bird could sing

Confused Â by the wind, bruised by the size of the rain she turned back to him, and begged for love to remain but plans have been made and all of the furniture sold, so just store up your hate, Â and use for warmth when you're cold

For I have seen no joy, only danger,
I see no joy, only strangers,
I see no joy, see no joy in this world should you, choose to go, please be careful of, lonesome roads, men that travel them, will not know, will not know of your ways

Still I see no joy, only danger Â I see no joy, only strangersÂ Â I see no joy, see no joy in this world, Should you choose to roam please be faithful of what you learnt from that little bird,
always dear, always dear to my heart
