(Verse 1)

Only see when eyes are closed.
Branded into back of eye lids.
Nail marks all over my palm.
Biting, scratching, 'cause I can't keep calm.

(Chorus)

Cuz we lost our chance and now it's too late.
When the sick romance ends, it's never the same.
And we're getting used to saying good bye.
That it's hardly ever such a surprise.

(Verse 2)

Body's down below, your mind's at top.
To which way am I to talk?
Maybe both ways are just vain, no need.
Perhaps reminders are just pain to feel.

(Chorus)

Cuz we lost our chance and now it's too late.
When the sick romance ends, it's never the same.
And we're getting used to saying good bye.
That it's hardly ever such a surprise.

(Bridge thing)

Keep trying to remember so that I don't forget.
Memories die quietly if not replayed.
Looking forward to the past I've gone insane.
But I need to see you again. However I will.

(Chorus)

Cuz we lost our chance and now it's too late.
When the sick romance ends, it's never the same.
And we're getting used to saying good bye.
That it's hardly ever such a surprise.

Cuz I'd rather have blades skate over wrists than have to go on living like this.
And it's 12 a.m. and I shut my eyes.
It's the only way to keep you in mind.

Cuz we're too far to be able to touch.

And your memory's like drugs; I feel the rush.
And we're still together only when my eyes are closed.
So I'm dying to die, forever dosed.
