"Here comes the beep, you know what to do"; Waiting for the tone.

Just before you speak, don't know what to say, putting down the phone.

Tickets in your hand: Two for the movie & one for your bus fare.

O'Course I understand, I'll buy the popcorn so that we can share.

I, I, I feel guilty 'cause we're both so young, you
O, O, Owe me nothing, guess we're both so stung.

It isn't fair 'cause you can tell when I'm telling lies.
Just cannot bear, that you can see me right through these eyes.

Your parents know, the two of us don't have to say much.

Obviously no, unnecessary when we can touch

I, I, Ice cream melting on your bed and now they'll Ho, ho, hold us shouting 'til neither tattletales.

When I went too far, you thought it was inevitable.
It was what we are, but to them, it's unpardonable.
Why it felt so true, you told me but I can't say it back.
You know I really do, but feelings never act like real facts.

We had different fates, our paths were set ups, no left or right,

And it is too late, there's no turning back after that night.

Now we're not the same, our lives moved on, despite our minds' stay.

Nobody's to blame, we didn't keep ourselves at bay.

I, I, I still feel that neither of us will get
O, O, Over, destinies changed when we first met.

I, I, I won't ever define what we had, sweet.
Ho, ho, hold me, always confine me within your reach.
