The last time she departed to find herself, the sun was shining, and amongst the clouds and wind, the birds and skies were burning. She thought that all she was seeing wasn't real, but at the end of the world there's no place for dreams.

There is a battle around the world for being someone that we can't. There is a story that never will be told and it belongs to us, their names are ours.

She was feeling blind, floating on the smoke, an innocent behind you all. She was feeling like a deaf-mute trying to have a conversation, this is the end of the world...

There is a battle around the world for being someone that we can't. There is a story that never will be told and it belongs to us, their names are ours.

Why did all she believed in fell through? Go away, flee from your future!

There is a battle around the world for being someone that we can't. There is a story that never will be told and it belongs to us, their names are ours.
