

The Lower 48 "The End"

Visit "The End" on MotoLyrics.com

I was watching you on the tv screen
you were turning green beneath the sun Your subtle subtext and your doubtful justice they were on display for everyone It's been awhile since I've seen you I start to smile as your color changes shades from green to blue You don't talk to me and reacting properly
I don't ever talk to you
Oh I release you my old friend
I think we've finally reached the end
Oh I release you my old friend
I think we've finally reached the end
I remember days when we entertained the thoughts that nothing here could break us up I guess that we were wrong enduring for far too long the things that scratch and ruin a friendship Well I fled to the coast and tried to make the most of my life my trade my faults and my hard facts I guess its half my fault and you don't need a crystal ball to see that dwindling love don't come back I was watching you on the tv screen
And this is where all maps end

Visit The Lower 48 page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.