

The Lumineers

"Where The Sidewalk Ends"

Visit "Where The Sidewalk Ends" on MotoLyrics.com

Songs of innocence play a sour tune.
You tune the dial, but the static still remains.
We fear the silence, so let's listen to the faceless name.
Don't swing on my emotions and play off my actions.

This isn't going to be another shot in the dark.
But only another step closer to seperation.

I'm not going to run this race forever.
And this has everything to do with what you said last night.
Ride the railroad that drives the nails and write it down in your diary.
Because this is better than a photograph.

This isn't going to be another shot in the dark.
But only another step closer to seperation.

Remember not remembering?
It all ends here sometimes.
Do you remember when we couldn't remember?
It all ends here sometimes.

Let's sit back, tip the glass, and say those were the days.
Because this is where the sidewalk ends.

Waving your hands goodbye.
Please don't make me say the bitter words.
This tears me apart...
Goodbye.

Visit The Lumineers page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.