I'm melting, I can't feel a thing
I'm falling through an open door
I should have stayed where it was safe
I can't imagine what's in store

All I see
Is everything I've wished I could be
I suppose
I never really tried to let go

The silent flame, the shifting skin
The patterns in the fragile wall
I can't escape, this vision burns
It drags me through forbidden halls

All I see
Is everything I've wished I could be
I suppose
I never really tried to let go

Everything is starting to make sense now
I can feel the fear subside
All my questions seem to find their answers
I can see, it's looking fine

I can feel
(Everything is starting to make sense now)
The fear inside of me starts to subside
(I can feel the fear subside)

I can see
(All my questions seem to find there answers)
The clouds right by me, start to recede
(I can see, it's looking fine)
