Old Man

Your dad quit his job

Oh

Yeah he told off his boss

Oh

After getting released from the doctor's last night

Cause its been harder to sleep

Oh

It's all he can do just to keep

Oh

He said it's finally time he tried to get it right

Old men

Old men

Old men

They're always thinking of the end

Old men

Old men

Old men

I am turning into one of them.

Old men

I started writing a book

About all the chances I took

But the whole thing was over by the second page

It's getting harder to see

If there's a chance left to be

Who I was dreaming of at half my age

Old men

Old men

Old men

Old men

They're always thinking of the end

Old men

Old men

Old men

Old men

I am turning into one of them

Oh

Old men

Oh

Nothing lasts

But it's going further faster

And there's so much left for me to master

Half the time I'm trying to figure what I'm after

The distances are only getting vaster

There's no telling when the end, begins.

Chorus
