

The Mowgli's "The Great Divide"

Visit "The Great Divide" on MotoLyrics.com

I head east towards the city, and when the sun goes down I'm headed home again.
The city lights have left me empty.
They've replaced the stars that used to shine so bright.
But I will smile and I'll keep you close.
And when the sun brings in the morning, I know today
will be better than the last.
And as I turn into the evening, I pray my dreams will come and I'll cross the great divide.
And don't, don't go changin' .
And please, please come and save me.
With your smile, you keep me close.
And oh, oh how you move me with your love.
Oh, how it swept right through me.
And with your smile, you bring heaven.
The way the west is home to reason, so that's where I've gone.
I've gone to meet my maker.
And when I find what I was made for, this soul of mine
will finally find so peace.
So I will smile and I'll see you there.

Visit The Mowgli's page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.