When we first met the world was all a clear blue sky
As time passed more clouds appeared
But now the horizon seems to be as black as night
And the drenching downpour will soon be here

While the storm lashes out with rain
Your words thunder inside my brain
And the winds of our passion drives on the pelting pain

With the torrent of who is right
In a hail of anger and spite
We are shattered to splinters
by a flash of jagged light.

The rivulets pool the drops that show with all our tears
What was once a puddle is now a sea Washed away the laughter weâ€™ve enjoyed over these years
Once our hateful flood is finally free

While the storm lashes out with rain
Your words thunder inside my brain
And the winds of our passion
drives on the pelting pain

With the torrent of who is right
In a hail of anger and spite
We are shattered to splinters
by a flash of jagged light.

The icy winter wind just freezes feelings numb
It howls through our affinity Searching for some shelter from the gale that weâ€™ve become
Hoping love will melt in summerâ€™s breeze

While the storm lashes out with rain
Your words thunder inside my brain
And the winds of our passion
drives on the pelting pain

With the torrent of who is right
In a hail of anger and spite
We are shattered to splinters
by a flash of jagged light.
