You walked into my life
The night I came home from London
Wearing your typical curious eyes
It didn't take a lot of time
For you to open up
And I was looking to keep you for the night

So we caught a cab home
A little drunk and finally alone
We didn't do much talking till we woke

And you said
"Tell me something about you
I don't know how I was ever living without you
Take me somewhere far away and never look back"
But I thought you were falling way too fast

We were young so we kept it up for a couple months
I developed a bad habit of taking advantage of your love
You got left out, pushed down
And when you fell I didn't pick you up
'Â€ÂˆI guess I've never cared quite enough
'Â€ÂˆWell it came time to make the call
But it was not your fault
I was bored and I'm as stupid as they come

And you said
"Tell me something about you
I don't know how I was ever living without you
Take me somewhere far away and never look back"
But I thought you were falling way too fast

I'm sure that it came as a big surprise
I still can't say why
Despite the ocean in your eyes
I had to wave goodbye
To the days when you'd say

"Tell me something about you
I don't know how I was ever living without you

Take me somewhere far away and never look back"
But I've been through it in the past
And these things never last
I'm sorry you got hurt
But you had fallen way too fast
