I remember when I saw you, babe, for the first time, it was May and you were sitting in the front seat of a car parked in front of a house the house that you would one day stay when you finally moved to L.A. and everyone else had flaked Oh, if you only knew
But I agreed to play a few shows with you so we went up to Santa Cruz to live the Carny Life

Then we found ourselves in an awful mess and all the plans we made were best kept sitting in a mason jar above a kitchen sink then one I miss, oh, so terribly so please don't say "Oh, Marry me" unless you mean it this time

But, oh, don't you worry dear because I know you don't intend to stay and I'm sure that I'll find a way with or without you but for now I choose to walk with you on the cloudy days let the whole world wash away for this point in time Oh, because time is such a silly, silly thing when you notice how it changes things everything but Santa Cruz
