I ain't no thing.
No, I can't sing.
I just sit by the window looking for a better scene Because I can't stand by but I try, I try and in the end I'm told no one can arrive No, there ain't no day that I'll say there's nothing left for me to take because I'll always want more, and it's a trick coin both sides are telling me there just ain't no point but I keep going on like I'm going to change the whole damn world, and make a perfect name but I'm only one, and it's only what I see and these eyes can't see past the weak

Chorus:
So you see I can't.
No, I can't see what you, you see in me No, I can't.
No, I can't see the change you say I bring.

Yet I was told by a good friend I got my life in the palm of my hand and through the tears I looked him in the eye hoping to God that I'd remember this time because I got it good, but I feel so low giving all of my love 'til I ain't got no more and no one asked, but still I chose to give my worth
To take the blow and it's only one that can change my mind but it ain't me, and that's the problem I find.

(Chorus)
