[Verse-1]

Manhattan autumn, a morning like any other
She woke up thinking sheâ€™s the luckiest mother
But she feels so helpless when heâ€™s not around
She feels the weakness heâ€™s always kept her from

[Verse-2]

Said mama Iâ€™m off now, I've made you pancakes
I will give you a call on every break
Bent down to kiss her and take a look through her eyes
To read the words she would never let him realize

[Bridge]

Donâ€™t go, I need you
In every breath I breathe you
Itâ€™s yet to come

[Chorus]

The moment to know...

[Verse-3]

Staring at the tree, outside the window
She was counting the leaves, waiting for the next wind to blow
But out of the blue, there came a strong wind
Shook 'em off of the tree, all the yellows and greens

[Verse-4]

Glasses were shaking, panic in the streets
Chilled to the bone, she was caught in a bad dream
Emergency sirens filling any gaps of silence
She could hear her words out there but no longer soundless

[Bridge]

Don't go, I need you
In every breath I breathe you
And here it comes!

[Chorus]

The moment to know

[verse-5]

The moment to know he was flying away
And she will never find the words to pray
The moment to know he will never come home
Manhattan autumn remains forever grey
