My eyes are weary,
From staring through mirrors
Searching my remains
Of an old changed face

Trying to recall
What I left and why
What have I done?
Oh what have I done

Carry us on
Take all the weight
From Miles to minutes
From the shore to this

Shipwreck of
Drowned out thoughts
That fall and crash
Like waves on me

I'm cold, and getting colder
Sinking in the sea
I'm numb from the distance
The guilt is killing me

If these letters
Are all we have
I'll keep on writing
Till the ink runs dry

Cause I'm a wreck,
As I walk these streets alone
Beneath the lights that guide me home
I realize that this home is unknown to me

Carry us on
Take all this weight
From Miles to minutes
From the shore to this

Shipwreck of
Drowned out thoughts

That fall and crash
Like waves on me

Cause I never knew the dagger distance held
Until it took my heart and sold it to the waves
So far from the shoreline that I no longer wanted to know
If I could survive without you

So I'm coming home to you
I'm coming home for you

I didn't know, never knew you
Sold your heart to the depths of blue
To an anchor that tore you apart
Oh, It tore me apart

But I believe, our hearts were much stronger
And found the currents to navigate
The oceans that split us in to
They split us in two for the last time

I didn't know never knew you...sold you heart too
I'm coming home to you
