(White)

A new day, a new found fire burns inside me. Looking up at twenty years that came before me. Careless and cornered, looking out. Then it hit me. Times are changing, life is ordinary here. Forget our homes, let's leave today. I'm not so bored, with one more chord behind me things will work out fine. The filtered friends. The fake pretending is over, left me just in time. Then she tells me that together there is nothing we can fear. Forget our homes lets leave today.
