Young girl born into a broken home
Her home was broken because her father left them alone
And her mother was never a picture of a perfection
But she gave birth to her so she was therefore elected to Protect her no matter what but easier said than done It's easier to run than face your own fears So she found comfort in men that was less than upstanding
In certain one's opinion Maybe not the best start in life constant coughing from the passive smoking
She was so open to her surroundings she soaked them in Stronger than poisoning It's probably then she began To conjure up dreams of living like the lucky in the movies
One brother a dog a mummy and a daddy or any other type of reality that was Less like hers, lessons learnt through local lads who'll lash your purse And little girls who scrape, their curls and fashion is their main concern.
v Seasons change, autumn, winter, spring to summer Life's a game but the winning is in playing my friend
When you see her don't just see her faults and failures
'Cause she's winner, she made her story last forever

School was so so kinda felt aimless Teachers aint paid well so they aint focus But can you really blame them they never had a bonus Teach in monotone put you in a coma
But she had better teachers on road Learnt about stocks and shares and how they grow Learnt about commodities and probably the reason she don't want no GCSEs
'cause shotta aint got them but they still pushing whips sovereign rings one ten kicks Things don't click the message aint clear talking about things that don't resonate here

'Cause what's exam when you're sitting here broke Dad's in jail mums on coke and she keep taking all the money out your coat and lorry's outside screaming gimme what your owe so she turns on the telly but still hears his voice it's just a reminder she aint here by choice
