I had imagination stirring in my head
The greener pastures, more comfortable than lying in your bed
You would sleep so tight to my every toss and turn
I couldn't dodge the streetlights even under covers
And I can't be sure
If I was dying lying next to you
Or if I was trying to keep from flying with you

I felt this pressure in my chest
To love you more than my heart could spend
I gave you the most as I let you go
It's the conflict I've had with being in love
Walking so tall
While watching it fall
Wanting it all

You had a gentle touch for a man at your size
You had the words that could make a man take off his shirt and dry his eyes
Was I really dying lying next to you?
Baby when we weren't trying I was flying with you

I felt this pressure in my chest
To love you more than my heart could spend
I gave you the most as I let you go
It's the conflict I've had with being in love
Walking so tall
While watching it fall
Wanting it all

Was I really dying lying next to you?
Maybe me flying is forever crying over you

I felt this pressure in my chest
To love you more than my heart could spend
I gave you the most as I let you go
It's the conflict I've had with being in love
Walking so tall
While watching it fall
Wanting it all
