Castaway.

Navigating through these troubled seas, floating day
by day.

This never fading fog insists that I might go astray.

(So how long must I weather these storms alone?)

Without a vessel, this anchorâ€™s my escape.

It seems no other way.

As daylight falls, I fall apart.

Iâ€™m taken by the tide.

Swept away,

These currents always find a way to take me to where I want to be.

Carry me, these currents carry me.

(Iâ€™m a forsaken castaway)

These currents carry me to the shoreline.

Looking back, to where Iâ€™ve gone, to where Iâ€™ve started and what Iâ€™ve lost.

How can I no longer be ignored, when everyoneâ€™s
so self-absorbed?

It only takes one moment for your life to change.
