VERSE ONE:

Chimaroke Abuachi -

Throw away that feeling if it makes you back down
They sense you're not being real, it's like you don't exist

They make you think the realest connection is from their lessons

Though it involves deception of your true intentions
A sword will make you believe your world isn't round That's why you sharpen your tongue for what will be sung

I'll be the only voice that stands out in the crowd
Like falsetto on the bridle of a giants growl
This mask is not to hide, it's an extension of my flesh
To show those who invite the blues that I'm still content
To ward off the infectious vibes that are being sent Don't be ashamed of who you are!

CHORUS:

They say change
But we are who we are Stay the same
'Cause we are who we are
Why change
When they love who we are Nothing, nothing
Changes who we are

VERSE TWO:

Mark Hoy -

Yeah, and that's a matter of fact
And not a person on this earth is ever altering that I fought the attack of naysayers and lame haters
That would love to see the fall of a giant but I'm taking Everything they got
And never going to be knocked down I stand my ground
My dignity is indelible you can't tear me down
I stand proud leader of my own dreams Never to be knocked down by all their plotting and schemes

I feel supreme
The feeling being genuine brings
All too often people settle for a lesser belief
Beyond your reach I bring the proof
Lace the page and blaze the booth
Out my cage and on the loose
I'm never changing for you
