Betty's in a wet T-shirt, feeling foolish and vain Looking like some housecat that got caught out in the rain
Staring into the mirror at this less-than-pretty picture Feeling ten years older now, and fifty bucks richer Life is hard, can't buy happiness no matter what you do Can't get to heaven on roller skates -- can't take a taxi cab to Timbuktu
Paul was a poor little rich boy -- he never had to cry Whenever he complained of aches and pains the doctors would drop by Now he goes to parties with the prettiest girls in town
They get paid five hundred dollars just to kick him when he's down
After he stiffed a waitress, and ran out on his tab Big Mac had a heart attack in the back of a Yellow Cab
By the time the sound of the siren said the ambulance was coming
His heart had stopped beating, but the meter was still running Ain't no escaping when the rent comes due
