Once we played hiding (and seeking) games ran away (and) opened our eyes (prayed to) fathers suns holy ghosts dreams of life beyond our sights but can we keep our souls innocent not left behind (if not) we'll fade away (disappear and all we see will be) erased by time watch it go by {watch it go by feel every grain of sand} and i'll watch it all fly {under my toes slip away} slip away and i feel every moment i'm losing {with the tide watch as we die} can we see it changing everything {the lights dim with fading dreams} disappear with pieces of non-plastic playgrounds {carried upon our sleeves} and i swear everything that i've learned will probably just hurt me now but everyone swears it will all be alright "as you grow and give away yourself you will be happier" but everyone forgets who they all used to be {lights dim with dreams carried upon our sleeves} and i don't ever want to lose the smile on my face but everyone is fighting to keep their eyes down but i want to stare straight at the sun even if it kills me but everyone is too scared to die
