"Child Of Day"

He sings to the birds in the trees
Arousing them with his melodies
He runs down to the waterline
Soaking in the sun's first light

He scrambles up hills and hides in caves
To shelter from the falling rains
The sun comes out and he lifts his hands
Singing his song throughout the lands

Darkness stay away
I'm a child of day

He wraps himself in his only clothes
As he dances through the winter snows
Rivers of youth run through his veins
Exploring all the uncharted plains

He's free in spirit, free in soul
Mind and heart do not grow old
Born with nothing yet everything's his
Born of the wild, still learning to live

Darkness stay away
I'm a child of day
