I saw the news a tornado tore up a small town
One home untouched but the next destroyed
Some say it's another sign of a final count down
No reason or explanation to fill the void

Some will claim it's god's retribution
And some will say there's no god to get revenge
Just another weather pattern that has changed its direction
Two sides of nothing to the man whose family is dead

Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living
Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living

And then there's those who appear to have a good life
Satisfied with everything as long as they win
But as the pendulum swings to the other side
With big change the big questions begin

I see the worry even in smiling faces
I see a world of hurt with no end in sight
A pageant of seeming unfair circumstances
True/false, wrong/right the question is why?

Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living
Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living

Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living
Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living

Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living
Give up, give in
Give me a reason for living
