"The Wedding Dress"

She wore a wedding dress to the funeral
She said the dead don't rest for the beautiful
And as she pulls her groom out from the ground
They give him one last kiss before they lay him down

She wore a wedding dress to the funeral
She said the dead don't rest for the beautiful
And as she pulls her groom out of the ground
They give him one last kiss before they lay him down

We cannot live conviction
My frame of mind was lived, not lost
The dream is nearly over
The end is where we meet, in wait, to dream, again

Get back in there
I'm losing ground
What are you, I'm not around
I know it's not, a simple day, a simple life I live
She wore a wedding dress to the funeral
She said the dead don't rest for the beautiful
And as she pulls her groom out of the ground
They give him one last kiss before they lay him down

We'll never know the meaning
Our eyes can't look beyond our own face
But meaning isn't purpose
We know it's you that begs for the life, you were willing to waste

Get back in there
I'm losing ground
What are you, I'm not around
I know it's not, a simple day, a simple life I live
Go!

(I was unable to hear this part well enough)

You know I must confess, Mr. Rational
Because the dead don't rest for the beautiful
And as she pulls her groom out of the ground

They give him one last kiss before they lay him down

This is as close as I could get to getting the actual lyrics (sat here listening to the song as I typed it, since no site I've found has decent lyrics for most of 2 Cents' songs) so it may not be entirely accurate, but I tried my best.
