We have crossed many a great ocean
To engage in battle with the enemy abroad
For far too long we have been threatened from the east
But we will not stop until we have won

Only the bravest, mightiest of men
With courage in their hearts and fire in their blood
Would lend their steel to protect thy throne
And spill their blood on enemy soil

The fighting was most fierce, clashing steel echoes through my mind
I gave them the edge of my sword and left their blood soaking in the sand

Thousands of warriors fighting for their cause, battled to protect, and honor thy name He who survived sailed home triumphant, now we shall return, for victory is ours!
