many years have passed, and many are coming brief is the light that shines so pale in a sacred place a man is kneeling to end an everlasting fairytale he remembers how the time passed by he remembers how to say goodbye

open your wings and fly up to the darkened sky
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)
open your wings and fly
I'll leave my last goodbye
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)

he's looking back into the days into the time she passed away he's seeing a smile, a lovely face he knows exactly who's to blame he was never meant to make her cry he was never meant to say goodbye

open your wings and fly
up to the darkened sky
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)
open your wings and fly
I'll leave my last goodbye
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)

one last prayer he says while on his knees he's getting up, his mind is finally at ease he turns away and leaves the flowers on the grave he walks away with a twisted smile on his face

up to the darkened sky
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)
open your wings and fly
(fly my darling, fly my darling now)
