Forbidden entrancement by the mighty necronomicon,
Crowley
A dismal recitation, the names of all consuming beasts

Taken the oath, in rituals of tortured screams Subconscious invocation to a landscape of tormented dreams Seeking pentagrams, embedded in sleep, in sacred walls of flesh and coal The dungeons of necromancy, blood filled maze of insanity

Winds of black vortex, draw me towards the abyss Brought forth to the urn to drink the filth of immoral bliss Pentagrams bleeding, souls petrified, gathered at the styx, demonified

I sleep within the pyramid, in dreamscapes apparitions become active Penetrating the columnar wave Dark influence on the soul, body flaccid

Departure from life without sorrow, ensnared by Baalberith
Witnessed his lust for infanticide, stared into his murky eyes
Descent into purgatory

Red lava, the trepidation of molten streams Blood sculpture, the haunting claustrophobic proximity Black waters, drowning me in inverted dreams Insane maze, sarcarium tormentum

Convoluted soulflight, astralic nightmare, immortality or cease Subterranean voyages obscene
As a sacrificed infant bearing ancient breath Horrific scenery, the stare of grim faces Embedded in the halls of twisted flesh

Drawing nearer to the snarling awoken

All of my past wounds bleed afresh Led to an enclave of dismay Forced to taste a gruel of my own flesh

I dream within the tomb, abandoned to sarcarium tormentum

Asral entanglement, where the stars and hell converge, Unknown curse of Cheops compels my morbid urge to self immolate and burn!
