I built a wall, I smashed the bridges to the past I burned like a Phoenix, and I changed the cast sometimes I cry and sometimes I smile to quench this fire I will need a little while I set the clock to seize the rest of the day my legs are still weak, no I can't go your way this ""water of life"" is not what it seems but I can get some hours sleep without this dreams

'cause even the seawind brings to me your golden hair
I see your beauty in all the birds up in the air I kissed your lips in every single short affair you are everywhere, even in my prayer
...and the old man doesn't care

I want to be a piece of chocolate everyday I could be by your side, until you gave me away even if you eat me I could feel your lips again your lips your kisses were like the summer rain sit down, have a break and listen to these rhymes
I thought of you when I wrote down these lines
I forgot about so many things that I once knew
But I will never, never, never forgot you

' cause even the seawind...
