He's got papers on his desktop, they're stacked up in a bunch

Dagwood worked for decades, he's never been promoted once

Blondie's got the lunch crowd in a catering cafe

She's tired of making meatloaf, it's time to get away

Hey Blondie you're looking pretty good for a girl who's 82

Hey Blondie out of all those high society women, he chose you

And Dagwood get off the couch, don't you fall asleep so soon

You gotta take her up on the roof and take a look at the moon

Dagwood's not the morning guy so he makes the car pool late

The bossman cut vacation back and he never gets a break

The fashion cleaner lady says I hope you're not upset

But your wife picked up the laundry, she's afraid you'd forget

Chorus

Black and white on workdays, how fast the weekend flies

Sunday morning colors help to open up our eyes

She says I love you Dagwood and with that love comes trust

I think a little bit of rooftop romance just might do the trick for us

Chorus

I've got trouble on my T.V, I got bad news in my car

I can always count on those two cause I know right where they are

So I flip on past the real world spill my coffee on the page

And I find that some old couple whose true love won't ever change

Chorus
