(Pam Tillis/Radney Foster)

I know it was pretty strange timing and maybe the odds were bad

We were awkward as a couple of left-footed dancers, baby we were pretty sad

You tried to tell me that it just wouldn't work

Your heart was too far gone

And it might have been easier to leave you alone

I've seen enough to know, a heart worth savin'

Enough to know, a chance worth takin'

Even though you're tryin' not to let it show

There's a part of you that's dyin', dyin' to let go

And i've seen enough to know, I've seen enough to know

There's a light in your eyes and a warmth to your touch that wasn't there yesterday

And there's a crack in the wall that you've built around your heart

And it's startin' to give way

It's taken time, it's taken patience waiting in the dark

But my intuition's been right on the money so far

I've seen enough to know, a heart worth savin'

Enough to know, a chance worth takin'

Even though you're tryin' not to let it show

There's a part of you that's dyin', dyin' to let go

know

There's a light in your eyes and a warmth to your touch
that wasn't there yesterday

Now there's signs of life and there's signs of hope

Signs of a real love starting to grow

Even though you're tryin' not to let it show

There's a part of you that's dyin', dyin' to let go

I've seen enough to know, I've seen enough to know

You know it's startin' to show, I've seen enough to know
