if i cant remember te words could you be my tongue for these few seconds and spit them out for me see ive crossed the line and ive done what i told myself id never weve become everything that we once hated feeling special actually listening to my conscience when it confronts me i told myself i wouldnt waste my time holding my breath for what may potentially be a lost cause leave me stranded branded stupid and all to often a sucker for the teenage delusion called true love but you changed me you are the risk that im taking ill stand beside the rest of our lives and put my trust in loves but i cant do this all alone i cant make you believe me when i say youre all i ever need youre the reason i believe that everything in my life has brought me to this point for a reason what were the last words that you said to me stuck hanging off your lips as i leave you talking yourself blue in the face again this loss for words cant get me out of what its got me in choking on the right lines picking up the wrong signs i understand that promises ("never speak of this again") mean nothing if the words have no meaning (i give in) but havent we already grown used to waiting?

(a promise is only words) and i can wait as long as it takes to make you see i mean it im so bad at goodbyes thats why i never want to leave youre side again so until the next time that i see you ive got to got to keep on breathing

got to keep on breathing

to make you see (kids leave her alone she needs this)
(just leave her alone she needs this)
