It's 4am and they alarm clock's set for 10
as the smoke clears and settles to the ceiling.
I'm coming down from falling for the promises that we won't work
there's no shame in giving in.

If I whisper it softly could you pretend i never said it.
Her lips barely touched me spread out on the carpet I'll be gone in a week but still she finds the strength to sleep, right next to me.

It's 4am and they alarm clock's set for 10 and I still can't shut my eyes knowing the thought of me not waking up might hurt you.
Through these words you wanna hear. You're all I want to see(to see)
If I whisper it softly could you pretend I never said it her lips barely touched me spread out on the carpet I'll be gone in a week and still she finds the strength to sleep right next to me(to me)

summers here but it slipped away to an island across the sea. Each night i scratch my accidents in walls that watch your lungs breathe softly
