Smell the rain and watch the sky
This is what I give you
Touch the skin and taste the lips
This is what I have given you
The sand is warm and so are you
Swirl in the water that lick the shores

I have no light to guide you
So make your way by strife
I have nothing else to give you
But an ending life

Never ask why daylight dies
Why the herds head for higher ground
Never ask why I thought you to lie
And to hurt the one you love

Never ask why the night is cold
And why the wind tears in your soul
Never ask why there must be an end

These are the days of struggling
These are the days when you breathe and dream
These are the days of never turning back
What lies behind you is only black
These are the wounds I bleed from
This mortal coil drains me so weak
These are the last words of wisdom
I'll ever speak
