She traps a velvet moth between her harmless hands,
Then builds an Atrium to perch on her night stand,
She lays to watch her fly, attracted towards the light,
She it all mine.

It's now another day in search for anything,
She'll take advantage of any human being,
She loves to watch me fly, attracted towards the light,
She's all mine, if she'd only leave the light on.

She breathes under my velvet wings,
If she'd only leave the light on.
She brings all that she used to be,
If she only left the light on.

I swear it's hard to tell if I'm the only one,
I found a photograph next to the Arium,
It's faded black and white, he's holding her so tight,
She's all mine, if she'd only leave the light on.

She breathes under my velvet wings,
If she'd only left the light on.
She brings all that she used to be,
If she only left the light on.

All the powder on your wings, make me feel I'm everything,
And every single evening I love you with the way I sing.

I sing.
