I'm so lonely I could die tonight
I know that's overstated and it's not lady behavior
But I'm tired
Tonight I need a man

I'm so restless I could leave it all behind
Sprout wings and hop in airplanes
Or drive West and feel the air change
In my chest as I breathe the open road

I should warn of how I make all of my friends
I meet them at a bar and fall in love with who they are
And how they drink me underneath the ground

There's no telling how I'll feel another day
They leave me I'm so crazy
But it's probably that I'm lazy
And I have too much time to waste

I know it's hard
To feel your own heart
Maybe it's best that I avoid the West

Cuz it's hot so hot

Well you're not the only man who drinks himself to sin
You say it's understood that there is suffering in what's good
But that you prefer to take it with a kick

I left you sleeping with a handle by your bed
It was the last time that I say you and I swore I wouldn't call you
But I'm not the time and place and have changed

What would you say
If I went away
Top of the world
Would you forget about me?

I wish nothing but the very best for you my love
All of your endeavors my ideas that are clever Maybe we will meet again upon a foreign coast within Speak of urban legends and share music and life lessons that we learned
