"Day One And Counting"

A voice says don't bother screaming
Day one has come and gone away
Served on this diet of needles and knives
Facing myself to stay alive

Are these the eyelids you tried to save?
(I drink to forget your face)

We all know what goes on
And we know just what you've done
It is even worth it to say I'm sorry, just because Such simple things I miss inspite of all this
Is it even worth it to say I'm sorry, just move on

A voice says don't bother leaving
Day one has come and gone away
Choking on hopes and words I never wrote
I'll try to survive on this long night

Are these the eyelids you tried to save?
(I drink to forget your face)

We all know what goes on
And we know just what you've done
It is even worth it to say I'm sorry, just because Such simple things I miss inspite of all of this
Is it even worth it to say I'm sorry, just move on

On this warm night the taste gets worst
The lips I thought I touched, now just hurt
Come on and catch me, I know that you want me
It's written all over your obvious arms
(I drink to forget your face)

We all know what goes on
And we know just what you've done
It is even worth it to say I'm sorry, just because

And no one tried you, I can't forgetsam
The night we came together and kissed each other
The smell of your breath, the feel of your neck
The scent of assurance, spilt over my neck
