"So Long, Euphoria"

You seem to remember my name now, you seem to remember my face We have been fighting for years now, we wasted our years and our blood

So long, euphoria, you've been a treasure in our lives We let the vultures in, to pick the bones of this affair A thousand years from now, we'll lick our wounds and say goodbye So long, euphoria, we set the table with sharp knives

We seem to be wasting away now, dust covers the traces we left Still I feel safer around you, when we feed on each others fear
