young girl steps out to her window drops her hopes and dreams and just lets go said the world's too much to take They could use one less heart to break so today might be my last they said i'll be alright just pick my head up and get on with my day they don't know the pain they don't know the way that this world is driving me insane mother, father where did we go wrong could have used some more affection for just one night, forever i'm gone could have used some more attention the whole world fades to black count your tears tonight, it still won't bring her back it's the writing on the wall, that we all fail to read it's the writing on the wall, that lets us know our children bleed

i'll awake today with brand new eyes and i can't wait let's just get me through this night
i'll awake today with brand new eyes and i can't wait
let's just get me through this night
let's just get me through this night
let's just get me through this night

they could use less heart to break

let's just get me through this night...
