This could have been a song about the wind
But my words were blown away
I could have sung about tomorrow
I couldn't find today

Forget about writing down my conversations
?Cause I can't think what to say
With nothing left to sing about my ax in tune
I got no choice but to sing to you

Oh now once won't you give me, twice won't you save
me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you
I said once won't you give me, twice won't you save me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you

I've been thinking about singing about a painting
But the colors make me spin
Or the mystery of a spiral, where would I begin?

I could have sung about piety
But I slammed right into sin
Now I've got a crowd around me
What am I able to do?
I'll take this song and offer it to you

Oh now once won't you give me, twice won't you save
me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you
I said once won't you give me, twice won't you save me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you

Might have sung about the ocean
But I'm stuck here on the shore
How could I ever ask for seconds
I couldn't take no more

I almost thought about a phone call
But talking's such a bore People left on for an hour ago, the window's tainted blue
So am I and I wrote this song

Oh now once won't you give me, twice won't you save
me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you
I said once won't you give me, twice won't you save me
Three times won't you let me sing this song for you
