

Beltaine

"The Sweetest Joy"

Visit "The Sweetest Joy" on MotoLyrics.com

He sat alone upon a hill, the waves pulling at his side
He could feel the salt inside his veins and could hear the storm arrive

He closed his eyes and saw her face, so plain the others had decried Yet he'd felt the warmth she'd held within and the beauty that lay inside

Yet their words soon blinded him, no beauty he began to believe Oh he turned his back and he toasted them, he drank the world for all to see

With haste she turned and chased the night, no tears to wipe with her hand While he searched the land to find his love he fell and cried 'please help this man'

He said it swells like the oceans flow, love drew me in as the tides draw the sea Oh but I was foolish just like my friends - I let my eyes rule what I should feel.

Visit Beltaine page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.