

Benevolent "The Quantum Paradox"

A near death experience
Relief at this blessed escape
In a parallel universe
Another version met their fate

While another did survive
To recover and prolong their life
The bush like branching prevails
As we remain divided

How can this be, another world, another me
What would happen if I return
To assassinate my forefathers
Shattering the family crest
What will happen to me next

Logic in opinion all around
Reasoning this quantum dilemma
The truth is no where to be found
As they remain divided

How can this be, another world, another me
What would happen if I return
To assassinate my forefathers
Shattering the family crest
What will happen to me next

Space and time, intertwined
Our existence, redefined
Parallel lives, endless trials
Dimensions remain divided

The fourth dimension of time
Neither uniform or absolute
Intersecting the might of space
Possibilities you can't refute
Countless incarnations of reality
They all remain divided

Space and time, intertwined
Our existence, redefined
Parallel lives, endless trials
