Blackthorn Winter

Let there be cold, doom and dark!
The ground's barren, the trees are stark
Let there be blizzard an' mist!
Wake up, carnivorous beast!

Consume the needless, tear the weak
Run more quickly, prowl an' seek
I strike my staff upon the ground
Nothing living shall be found

My fierce white hounds, with eyes of red
Howl through the night, a paeon to the dead
Astromancy let me know
That tonight someone will be reborn

O, wind that rages all night long
Wrap the maid and sing her a song
Oh, my Great Sloe! Lull the forlorn
By your mortiferous thorn!

Open your chest towards me
An' venesect your veins, for art

Will live in thee

You're what must winter
You're what must live

Permafrost will kiss your aching scores
Thou will sense tenebrose force

You're what must live

Her solitude is a sign
Of powers beyond a lifetime
Some tears never will dry
But inspire you to try.

Neomenia! Somber hecatomb!
Make a shelter in my gloom.
Take this thorn into your heart

Sleep, while it grows your part

The spine inside me
It leads me away
But keeps me for a following day

You're what must live
You are what must wait
Lustrate at this night
