Her pain is a fog he inhale
Puts down the phone, neck suddenly stale
Just another night with a sad different song
Heard from someone now she sings along
Turn the car-key, back out through the driveway
He sees her face when he close his eyes
She still believe the lies

Pretty pretty eyes with a darker tone
Another hour in front of a mirror now all the scars are shone
And They say lets have another toast lets sing another song
She tries but the wine is bitter and the words wrong
She still believes the lies

When you see yourself you're seeing red
And it makes you blind
You must be bleeding under your eyelids tonight
You wait for something to break the mold
And all I can do is wipe the blood from your eyes
You must be bleeding under your eyelids

One tear in the sink, swallow the next one
Now out of sight but not really gone
I put the key in the door don't want to walk through Hang on the handle for a second or two
And As the door opens I can feel your sadness from across the room
And now for your beauty I'm lost for words

When you see yourself you're seeing red
And it makes you blind
You must be bleeding under your eyelids tonight
You wait for something to break the mold
And all I can do is wipe the blood from your eyes
You must be bleeding under your eyelids tonight

Wait for something to break the mold.
You must be bleeding under your eyelids

When you see yourself you're seeing red
And it makes you blind
You must be bleeding under your eyelids tonight
You wait for something to break the mold
And all I can do is wipe the blood from your eyes
You must be bleeding under your eyelids tonight

Wait for something to break the mold
Before your eyes grows old and cold
Keeps your ears close to the ground
Don't move until you hear a sound
