Lost and Found

by Patty Larkin

Hey, I'd like to apologize for the world

Being what it is

And hey

I'd like to shield your sorrow

Hey, you know it took imagination

For you to survive

And maybe

Make it to tomorrow

When all of your dreams come crashing down

And you stand at the door of the lost and found

Who loves you now

Who loves you

Take my outstretched hand in yours

And I'll take all the hours

Till dawn's outside your window

Hey, don't waste another moment

Alone in here

Waiting

Shivering when the wind blows

When all of your dreams come crashing down

And you stand at the door of the lost and found

Who loves you now

Who loves you

No one can save you

From trials and demons

Nobody knows what you see

You can't walk on water

No matter what you believe in

But you can walk with me

When all of your dreams come crashing down

And you stand at the door of the lost and found

Who loves you now

Who loves you now

Who loves you now
