Did you not see the signs in my eyes
As the light burned dim
And despair, it stole the life from me?

Could you not feel the pain in your chest
As my heart slowed down
And my blood, it trickled down the drain?

And you'll never know - just - how bad I needed you
When you left that night
And you'll never know - just - how bad I needed you
When you left that night

But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die
When you walked right out that door
But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die
When you walked right out that door

And so this bathtub
Becomes my tomb
And - this water is my grave
I see in red
And - I drown in red
My soul you will not save - tonight

And you'll never know - just - how bad I needed you
When you left that night
And you'll never know - just - how bad I needed you
When you left that night

But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die
When you walked right out that door
But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die
When you walked right out that door

But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die

When you walked right out that door
But you couldn't have know that I
Was so ready to die
When you walked right out that door
