Why is your love like fire, she said
Why is your love my hell
Always prepared for your departure
Buried under another argument

Why is your love like rubber, he said
A gum stuck under my shoe
Leaving it there to avoid the risk of Making a mess out of you

So fall back into my absent arms
Fall back into routine disaster
Habit's the only place that you call home

Fall back into my desperate arms
Fall back into this old disaster
Cause it's better than spending all your nights alone

Why am I your child
Just as much as you are mine
Keeping me in your control
And keeping me in line

Why is your love so unfulfilling
And why can't my heart stand the test
You're playing this game of kiss or kill me
Why won't you give it a rest

And fall back into my absent arms
Fall back into routine disaster
Habit's the only place that you call home

Fall back into my desperate arms
Fall back into this old disaster
Cause it's better than spending all your nights alone

Looking back at myself
It's wrong how much I change for you
I sit back and watch my channels
Change just how you want them to

I'm staring out this window
I'm avoiding your emotion
I am hiding behind tappings
Of my fingers and the ocean

So fall back into my absent arms
Fall back into routine disaster
Habit's the only place that you call home

Fall back into my desperate arms
Fall back into this old disaster
Cause it's better than spending all your nights alone
[repeat 3x]

It's better than spending all your nights alone
