We know that we could sell your magazines
If only you could give your life to literature
Just don't read Jane Eyre!
Work on your algebra and stand out in the rain
And give yourself to simple pleasures but Never play card games!
Meanwhile, back at home
Not in Communist Russia, well only on my headphones
We plot our march onto the town hall
And if we'd take prisoners or simply simper at those fools

Please don't tell me to do the Math

Tonight we're gonna smash this place up
And then we're gonna deck it out with fairy lights
Til we are content!
And then we'll maybe drown in Dewey decimal
But leave our shoes outside the door
Cos that was the point!
Of us at home with the moon
Pouring through the curtains, working on our attitude Towards the second hand book shop employees Reading the inscriptions that were never meant for their eyes

Please don't tell me to do the Math

I'm stitching up each one of your pockets so when we are together you'll maybe look a little less bored I'm sticking your fingers into sockets to kick-start your little heart and maybe sleep a tiny bit more Oh maybe we should read more into the books that we adore,
perhaps we should drink less vitamin C
