You, you could be anyone.
Oh, you, you could be anyone,
But you, you're not just anyone to me.
No, you, you're not just anyone to me,

And I, I could be anything I want,
Cause I'm still young.
I could be anything I want,

So why am I not anything to you?
Why am I not anything to you?

I will sit in my room and I will think
About the cold cups of coffee that we drank,
At a diner on a highway near your place,
Where I counted all the letters in your name,

And said why, am I not anything to you?
Why am I not anything to you?
